Chapter 1 by Kenzawenza

The girl looked up at the stormy sky as the rain fell down and placed her violin into position. The glossy wood `grew slick from the rain but she seemed not to notice as she prepared herself to play. "Don't move." She commanded softly, to the man with the hostage beside him. "Let the girl go." "Or what? Are you going to play your little violin?" The man said mockingly, gripping the crying blond woman's throat tighter. Closing her stormy grey eyes the small girl gripped her violin and started playing. She played and she played and she played. And with that both the man and the victim fell to the ground unconscious, lulled to sleep by the unique music of the violin. Then pushing a small button on a flip phone, then throwing the small device away, the little brunette stowed her violin across a holster on her back and climbed the drainpipe of the nearest warehouse out of the lot, leaping away from rooftop to rooftop in the pouring rain.

Chapter 2 by Kenzawenza

The police arrived a few minutes later finding the victim and man still unconscious. After they wake the police officers find the man and would-be victim have no information regarding the mysterious musician, except she was relatively young, wore a hood, and played the violin.

This was the thirteenth situation she had stopped that was recorded by the police; six B&Es, four muggings or hostage situations, and three would-be rapes.

The police want to know who she is.

The wrong-doers want to eliminate her.

The would-be victims want to thank her.

The random citizens want to know what her superhero name is.

Who is she?

Does she only play the violin?

Is she a hero?

And if so, what is her superhero name?
